Cancer patient's mom returns from Bahamas

Patricia Calistro, mother of a 4-year-old cancer patient, arrived in the United States Sunday evening and will be meeting with friends and interested people Tuesday to discuss her daughter's illness and treatment.

The reception will be held 7:30 p.m. at Studio 3 in Milford. In a recent telegram to The Register, Calistro said briefly that there is "much news" to tell.

Calistro's daughter, Amber, has been undergoing treatment for cancer at the Immunology Researching Center in Freeport on Grand Bahama Island. The center offers an experimental and as yet unproven therapy for cancer by using various techniques intended to stimulate the body's natural immune system.

Amber, who has been at the Center since May, is still in the Bahamas undergoing therapy.
